*We make our lives in the world.
We live by G-d's will;
We aspire to His commandments.*

Kochaviah 1963

Look into the candle's dancing glow;
See the flame of fires long ago;
See the great menorah of our past,
As its light upon our lives is cast.

See the fire and smoke of thunderous mount;
Of which each soul can give its own account.
See the gleam of heroes' swords held high
And flames which swallowed up the martyr's cry.

Look into the flame and let the past
Guide every step we take until the last.
Let ancient wisdom light for us the way
Of Torah life within our world today.

Paulette Yaged

Armored by faith, Protected by tradition,

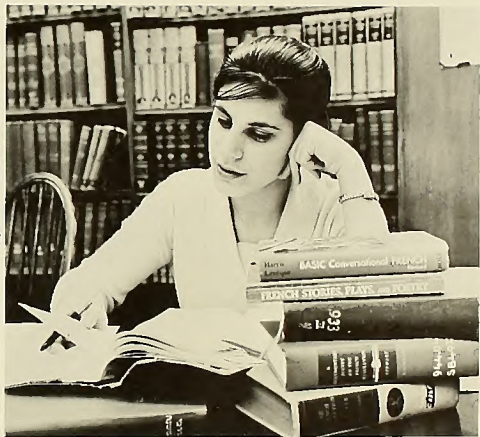

We came together to learn how to go into the world.

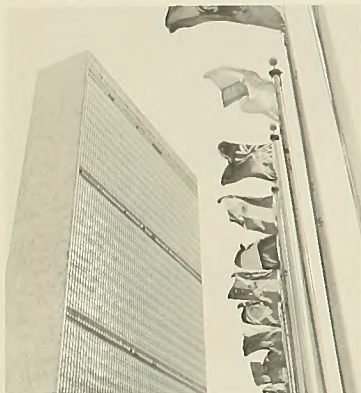

*We come from overseas,
from North, South, East, and West
To New York,*

Filled with hopes and dreams

Yet to be fulfilled.

The macrocosm holds no limits for us.

The college, our microcosm, becomes the focus of our lives.

Our new life begins . . .

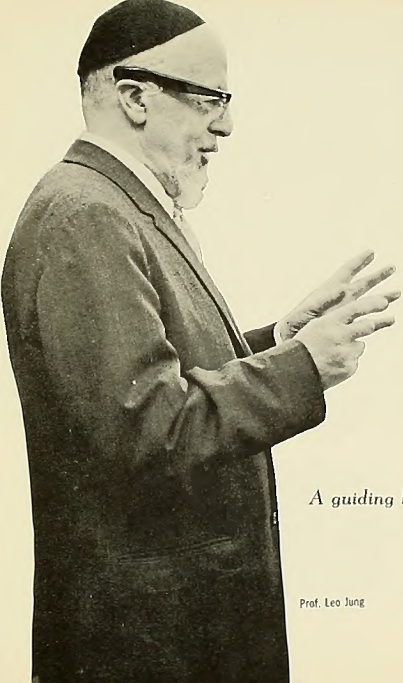

School commonds our time, Commondments guide our actions.

With every book we open, new vistas appear, old scenes take on new sharpness.

A guiding hond with every book directs our newly developed powers.

*Our actions gain direction;
Our understanding is reinforced.*

We see the modern world through eyes and hearts made perceptive by our ancient wisdoms.

The total experience of our lives and learning gives form, purpose and direction to the life we have yet to encounter.

We can dance and sing. We can listen and speak.

We can laugh at ourselves and sympathize with others.

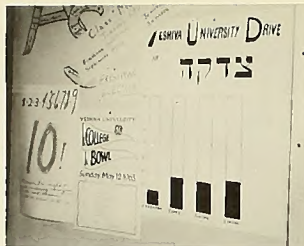

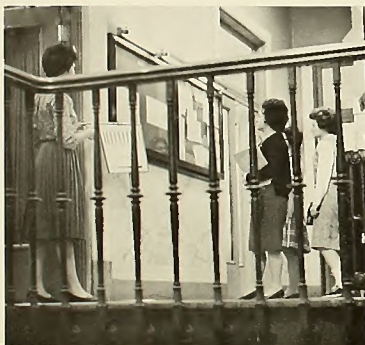

We are concerned about the world situation;

We are apprehensive about our present existence.

Sometimes aware but not involved;

Sometimes lost in involvement and forgetful of awareness.

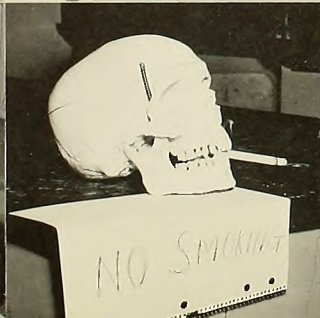

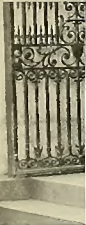

But always active . . .

Familiar faces and familiar places flash across our consciousness.

Though part of the crowd we maintain our identity.

*We live in the midst of the city,
yet we do not lose our meaning.*

We live in the macrocosm through the values instilled

by the microcosm.

We are ready for the world.

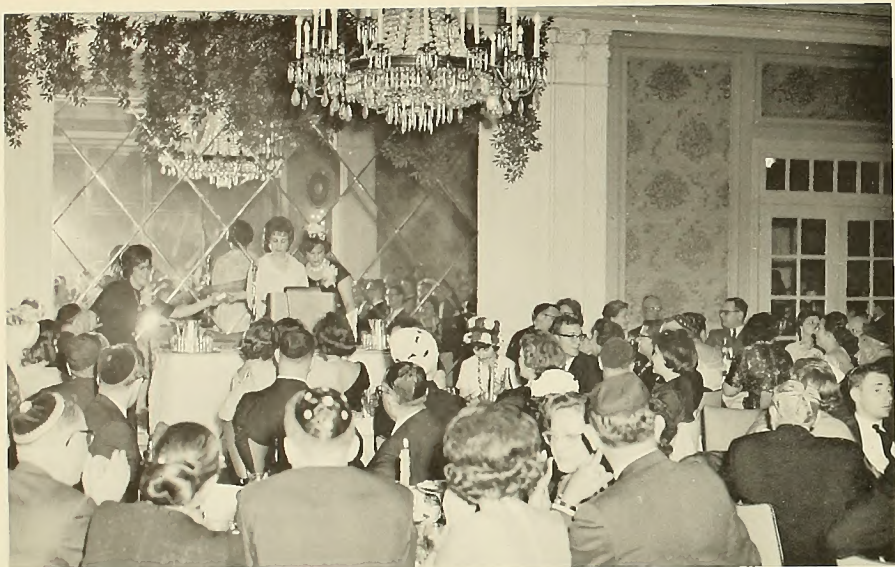

We welcome the chance to test our strength in the full pursuit of a meaningful life.

THE PUZZLE

The pieces lie
In puzzling disarray
In shapes and shades
As varied as their masters;
And mingled is the light
And dark together.
A hand goes out
And holds within its grasp
A piece that meets
Its favor and discretion—
A drop of water
In a sea of drops—
Each piece a part
That helps to make
The whole,
An interlocking form
That often brings
The joys of life
To one who makes
It fit.
